Grave of "Original" William Allred Found in North Carolina

by Linda Allred Cooper

Linda, Jack, Jesse Booker, George Scotton, Emsley, Jesse, ?

Early in March 2002, the East Coast Allreds visited the long abandoned Allred-Trogdon Cemetery in Randolph County, NC. This graveyard, originally owned by William Trogdon "the Patriot," contains graves dating back to the late 1700s. It was abandoned about 100 years ago. Located in the woods on top of a small mountain near Cedar Falls, local family stories have always led us to believe many of our original

North Carolina ancestors were buried there.

Mother Nature has all but reclaimed this cemetery. A thick carpet of periwinkle covers the ground. Small trees and brush blocked and hid many of the graves. Fallen trees lay on top of others. Although we could see the sunken impressions of many graves, most no longer have tombstones marking them. Others have only rocks marking their burial site.

As the men began talking about how the cemetery should be cleaned up and which trees should be cut down and removed, the women began trying to read the existing tombstones. Nancy Martin, Becky Allred Sexton, Sara Allred and I were “chalking” two tombstones standing side by side nearest the dirt road leading to the cemetery when Nancy remarked: “These dates match the dates on the wills for Elizabeth and William Allred.” All of us stopped and looked closer, hardly believing what we were looking at. The graves of William Allred and his wife, Elizabeth Diffie Allred, had been found!

Immediately we photographed and recorded the information on the stones. I rushed home to look at my copies of William and Elizabeth’s wills and estate records. Yes! The dates matched! The graves are indentified! The noise you heard in the distance that day was the sound of us shouting and celebrating!

William Allred, the man we call “The Original William” wrote his will October 14, 1822. In it he named his wife, Elizabeth; children, John, William, Elizabeth and Nancy and slave, Kintire. This will was proven during the May term of Court 1825. This information tells us that William died sometime between October 14, 1822, and the May term of Court 1825. Wills were generally brought to court shortly after the person’s death, so we felt William had most likely died either in late April or early May 1825, but without a grave or other documentation, we had no way of proving this before now. William’s tombstone proves our theory was correct. He died May 3, 1825.

Elizabeth Diffie Allred wrote her will October 27, 1827. It listed her heirs as Samuel Allred, Elizabeth Duncan, Sarah Elliott, William Allred, Thomas, son of Eli Allred, John Diffie and Elizabeth Laughlin. She also states that the balance of her estate is to be sold and proceeds equally divided between “my living brothers and sisters and where any of my brothers or sisters are deceased, their children to have on share with those living except John Diffie Jr. and Elizabeth Laughlin.” Elizabeth’s will was proven in open court during the November term of Court 1827, telling us she died very quickly after writing her will. (Her estate was sold at auction on December 3, 1827.) Her tombstone documents our theory, Elizabeth died the day after writing her will, October 28, 1827.

One rule that I have learned in genealogy is proving true with these exciting finds. When you find the answer to one question, it leads you to 20 more questions. Genealogy is a never-ending quest for these answers.

Elizabeth’s will lists her heirs, but she never calls them her children. She simply lists their names. Were they really her children? Was she their stepmother, the second wife of William? If so, who was the real mother of these children?

Among these heirs, is Thomas son of Eli Allred. Eli was the son of the “original” Thomas. Why was the grandson of the “original” Thomas listed as one of Elizabeth’s heirs? Current research has led us to believe that although William went by the last name of Allred, he was actually an Elrod and changed the spelling of his name shortly after arriving in North Carolina in 1753. Since he was an Elrod, he was not related to John, Thomas or Solomon Allred, the other three “originals. But, why did Elizabeth specifically mention Eli, son of Thomas, as one of her heirs? Were they really related?

Were they just friends? If they were related, was it because William was actually an Allred? Or were they related through the Diffie family? The list of questions goes on and on.

But, the answer to one question has been answered! We now know where the “original” William and his wife Elizabeth Diffie Allred are buried! Hooray! We think John and Thomas were buried on their land in Randolph County.

The Four "Original" Allred Brothers

To the best of our knowledge and research, William Elrod / Allred was born around the Fall or Winter of 1738 in Frederick County, Maryland. But, there is no documentation to prove this, just a lot of circumstantial evidence.

He definitely was not born in North Carolina. No white settlers are documented being in central North Carolina prior to 1742. William's tombstone lists his death date May 3, 1825. No birth date is listed on the tombstone.

No one knows where or when John, Solomon and Thomas were born. No one has ever been able to document anything about them prior to the land grants they received in the 1750's. Based on the ages of their children, the dates they received their land grants, and other clues, we think - and I stress that this is just a guess - that.

John was probably the oldest of the three men, possibly born around 1725. Where is not known. If we knew that, we could possibly figure out who his parents were. If he is the son of Solomon Allred who was in Chester County, Pennsylvania, in the 1720's, then he was born in Chester County. But, first, we have to prove he was Solomon's son. He wrote his will September 15, 1792, and it was proven in court during the December 1792 term. He died sometime between the day he wrote his will and the middle of December 1792, but an exact date is not known.

Solomon was probably the middle son, possibly born around 1730. Again, where is not known. He did not leave a will, but his estate was settled in court on December 26, 1782, so he died sometime prior to that date.

Thomas was probably the youngest of the three men. Based on the ages of his children and everything else we know about him, he was probably born around 1740. Again, where is not known. Thomas wrote his will on November 8, 1809, and it was proven in court during the May Session of Court 1810, so he died sometime between those two dates. Since wills are usually taken to court shortly after the person dies, he probably died in late April or early May 1810, but that's just a guess.

Allred First in 1930 Census

by Jim & Joyce Allred
jafamtree@aol.com

We arose early, 6:30 a.m. (well, that's early for us), to a beautiful bright spring day on April 1, 2002. We drove a short way to the Park-n-Ride to catch the shuttle bus to the Metro (subway) headed for Washington, DC. It was standing room only. Seems all the federal workers were back from spring break. No one was talking, everybody was reading the newspaper or a magazine, and some were catching a few more minutes of sleep.

It was a truly big day in the nation's capitol – the Cherry Blossom Festival was getting underway, Laura Bush was kicking off the Annual Easter Egg Roll on the White House lawn AND most importantly, at least to us, the 1930 Federal Census was being opened to the public at the National Archives.

The National Archives is a Neo-Classical building designed by noted architect, J.R. Pope. It is located a short distance from the White House, just down Pennsylvania Avenue.

We were greeted at the massive Archives doors by an armed security guard who directed us to the registration table located in the grand two-story marble foyer, illuminated by four 8' tall electric torchieres. After passing through a metal detector and having our packages searched by four other guards (security is high in Washington, DC, these days), we were issued passes and allowed to take the elevator to the fourth floor. The anticipation was building among our fellow elevator passengers. The elevator opened on the lobby outside the research room. The lobby was crowded with reporters, photographers and was brightly illuminated by klieg lights for the TV cameras. After a short speech highlighting the unique aspects of the 1930 census, the ceremonial red, white and blue ribbon stretched across the entry was cut by the Chief Archivist of the United States, John Carlin and C. Louis Kincannon, Director of the Census Bureau, and the research room was officially opened.

This huge research room contains hundreds of "readers" for viewing the microfilm reels on which the census records are stored. The reels are located in cabinets lining the walls. There is an ancillary room full of copying machines for making copies of the census records.

Because we had done a lot of "homework" on the 1930 census, we were prepared to go straight to the task before us. Joyce quickly located the proper reel for Canton, Ohio, placed it on the reader and almost immediately found Edward and Nannie Allred, Jim's parents. This was the first public record of the 1930 census to be displayed in the country – AND – it was an Allred family. When Joyce let out a yelp of glee, reporters, photographers and media people clustered around us to share in this historic moment. They snapped pictures, asked questions and generally wanted to know our reaction to finding this treasure. We were interviewed by the Washington Post newspaper, ABC news, CNN news and other reporters from local media. We talked about the value of family history, the excitement of doing genealogical research and the Allred Family Organization.

After the media excitement quieted down, we continued our search for other family members. The producer for ABC news returned and indicated they were very excited about doing an in depth interview for the Peter Jennings newscast of April 1, 2002. We asked if this was an April Fool's Day joke and they assured us it was not. They had visited the Allred Family website and were very impressed with the professionalism of it and ease of navigation. They invited us to the ABC studios to discuss further the impact of the day, genealogy and the value of exploring and documenting our family histories.

The hour-long interview was compressed into a very brief segment shown on ABC World News with Peter Jennings April 1, 2002. CNN Headline News also showed a clip of Jim and Joyce.

Now, as they say, for the rest of the story.

The original purpose of the census was to determine how many representatives each state would be allowed to send to the US Congress. The 1930 census is the 15th census, the first being conducted in 1790. By federal law, a census cannot be opened to the public for 72 years. The 1930 census consists of 4,254 rolls of microfilm; 2,667 of them are population schedules and 1587 are rolls of Soundex indexes for 12 southern states.

The 1930 census has a wealth of socio-economic information:

- Place of Abode i.e. - street name, house number
- Name of every person living in the "abode" as of April 1, 1930
- Relationship of each person listed to the head of the family
- Home Data i.e., house owned or rented, value of home if owned, or monthly rental; whether the family owned a radio set; whether the family lived on a farm
- Personal Description of each person including sex, race, age, marital "condition" and age at first marriage
- Education since September 1, 1929, and whether able to read or write
- Place of Birth of each person and of his/her parents
- Mother Tongue of Foreign Born i.e., language spoken in home before coming to US
- Citizenship, etc. - year of immigration, naturalization, whether able to speak English
- Occupation and Industry, i.e., trade, profession, or particular kind of work (spinner, salesman, riveter, teacher, etc) and industry or business (cotton mill, dry-goods, shipyard, etc.) and "class of worker"
- Employment, i.e., "whether actually at work yesterday (or the last regular working day)" and if not, "line number on unemployment schedule"
- Veteran, what war or expedition
- Number of Farm Schedule

Jim and Joyce Allred located his family records on opening day of the 1930 Census at the National Archives. Jim was pleased to learn his parents owned a radio in 1930.

The 1930 census will present researchers a major challenge for a while. Because Soundexing was a Works Progress Administration (WPA) project, when the WPA was disbanded in the 1940s there were a limited number of Soundex indexes completed (10 whole and 2 partial southern states) for the 1930 census. State alphabetical surname listings are not yet available for the 1930 census. However, the National Archives has Enumeration District Descriptions and Maps available.

So, what does all this mean? Until the alphabetical state indexes are published, you must have a very good idea where the party you are searching was located during the 1930 census in order to use Enumeration District Descriptions and Maps. The National Archives has available for purchase the 1930 Federal Population Census Catalog of National Archives Microfilm. Their website, www.archives.gov, also has finding aids and some of the above information can be viewed, i.e. enumeration districts.

All in all, we had an extremely rewarding and exciting day attending the opening of the 1930 Federal Census. We encourage everyone to visit one of the regional Archives locations listed on the above website or one of the libraries or history centers that have purchased the 1930 census.

*2nd Lt. Frederick Copeland
Solomon, Theophilus, Jonathan, Bailey,
Frederick "Fed"*

On October 13, 2001, Frederick Copeland Allred was honored with a special Memorial Service conducted by the Dillard-Judd Camp 1828, Tennessee Division Camp of the Year 2000-2001, Sons of Confederate Veterans based in Cookeville, Putnam County, Tennessee. "Fed" is buried in the Copeland Carr Cemetery, Cookeville, TN. The following is an excerpt from speeches made during this Memorial Service.

2nd Lt. Frederick Copeland Allred, known as "Fed," was born December 22, 1838, in Overton County, Tennessee. He left this world on August 22, 1924, when he was almost 86 years old. His father was Bailey Allred (1806-1869) and his mother was Sara Copeland (1810-1885). After the War, Frederick Allred would work as Overton

County Trustee. He married Rebecca Copeland on September 14, 1876.

"Fed" served in the 25th Tennessee Infantry, Company H. He was promoted to the rank of 2nd Lieutenant on August 3, 1862, and was a volunteer in the original Zollicoffer's brigade. He moved on to other commanders until entering into Johnson's Brigade on detached duty in the Department of Richmond, Virginia.

"Fed" Allred was severely wounded at the Battle of Stones River, better known as "The Battle of Murfreesboro" on December 31, 1862. He was sent home by an Army surgeon, not able for duty, through the rest of the War.

"Fed" was a proud Confederate soldier and did his job in the Confederate Army as a man of honor. We cannot begin to imagine the horror those brave men like Lt. Allred endured. The cold, the rain, the heat, mud and snow. Many a man even without shoes, dying men laying everywhere. Sounds of cry's, prayers from wounded and dying for God to protect their homes and loved ones.

George Emsley Allred, his wife, Ester Lillian Smith Allred. George and Ester lived in Randolph County, NC. According to family stories, they are buried in the Solomon Trogon Cemetery located along Highway 49 in the county. However, this cemetery was abandoned many years ago and is in a state of disrepair. George and Ester's tombstones are missing, possibly broken or buried under a few inches of forest debris. The East Coast Allreds are planning to clean this cemetery and hope to find all the missing tombstones. Family line: George Emsley, Samuel Hogan, "Tennessee" John, John, William.

Note: George's mother, Abigail Trogon Allred, was the daughter of Emsley Trogon who was the son of Solomon Trogon for whom the cemetery is named. Solomon Trogon's father, William Trogon, owned the land where the Billy Trogon Cemetery is located and where William Allred, George's great great grandfather is buried. The Trogon and Allred families had many close ties both as friends and because of marriages over the generations)

From Our First Issue: Spring City

Editor's Note: Several people have commented that would like more personal histories in the newsletter. Because this is the 150th Anniversary Year of Spring City, Utah, we noted two articles published in Volume 1, October 1989 of the Allred Family Newsletter. Because the first issue went to less than 100 people, we are reprinting these two articles about James and Isaac Allred. James was born in Randolph County, North Carolina, and his younger brother, Isaac, was born in Pendleton County, South Carolina.

The Spring City Allred Reunion is the first of the two Allred Anniversary Reunions scheduled for 2002. The 150th Anniversary of the founding of this small town in Central Utah is scheduled for June 28-29. See the poster on page 5.

The Spring City Reunion is located in the old Spring City Public School, 45 South 100 East. The school was built in 1899.

Spring City is located in Sanpete County, Utah, in the center of the state. It's a two-hour drive south from Salt Lake City and very easy to find. Take Highway I-15 South to 89 South. You'll pass through Spanish Fork, Fairview and Mt. Pleasant. At Mt. Pleasant, take the Spring City exit on the south end of town and follow the signs to the reunion site at the Old School.

Isaac Allred

by Inez Allred, wife of David H. Allred

Isaac Allred, son of William Allred and Elizabeth Thresher was born Jan. 27, 1788, in Pendleton [County], South Carolina. He was one of eight children. At the age of 22, he married Mary Calvert. They settled in the community of Farmington in Marshall County [then Bedford County], Tennessee. They lived there for 18 years and had 10 of their children there.

In 1830 the family moved 700 miles north and west to Monroe County, Missouri. Isaac's brother, James, and several of James' married sons had moved there the previous fall and founded what later became known as "Allred Settlement."

Two years later (in 1832), Hyrum Smith and John Murdock preached of a new Prophet by the name of Joseph Smith. James, Isaac and several other Allred families were baptized. It was here that Isaac and Mary had their 11th and 12th children.

When the saints were driven out of Monroe Co., the Allred's moved about 200 miles farther west and settled in Caldwell Co. Mary gave birth to her 13th child here.

The saints were once again driven from their homes by the extermination order of Gov. Boggs. Isaac, Mary and their 13 children moved about 250 miles back east to Hancock County, Illinois.

Isaac and his brother, James, and their families suffered much as they fled from devastated

Caldwell County. They had lost almost everything.

Isaac was a mason and he worked desperately to assist in completion of the Nauvoo Temple. In rags and without much food, they struggled until the temple was completed, and it was there that he and his beloved wife, Mary, received their endowments.

Anxious to own property in Nauvoo, Isaac placed himself under bond to a local landowner, in order to purchase land. The family lived in Nauvoo until 1846 when they were once again forced to flee for their lives. They crossed the Mississippi River on the ice in February 1846. After much deprivation, suffering and sorrow, the family struggled across the whole state of Iowa to a point eight miles east of Council Bluffs. Here he and James and their families including other Allred's formed a camp and planned crops. They stayed in what was called "Allred Camp" until 1848 when they moved west in the Allen Taylor Company. They arrived in Salt Lake on October 10, 1849. Only two years after Isaac and Mary arrived in the valley, Isaac's beloved wife, Mary, passed away.

Two years later, Isaac married a widow lady by the name of Matilda Stewart Park. They moved to Spring City and with his brother, James, was one of the faithful pioneer families. In his declining years, he was cared for by his sons that surrounded him in Spring City. He was highly esteemed by all that knew him.

Isaac Allred is buried in the old Pioneer Cemetery in Spring City. The cemetery is located on First East between Second and Third North.

James Allred

James Allred was a friend to the Prophet Joseph Smith. He endured all the hardships and persecutions that fell upon the early saints.

The following information on the life of James Allred is taken (with permission) from the book Kiss the Babies for Me, by Dawnell Griffin:

"At Carthage Jail, the Prophet (Joseph) handed his sword to James Allred and told him he might need it to defend himself. This sword is, at this time, in the possession of Hal Edwards, a third great grandson. After the martyrdom of the Prophet, James Allred went with his sleigh to the mail and brought the badly wounded John Taylor across the fields to the Taylor home."

"In the fall of 1851, President Brigham Young advised "Father Allred" (James) to select a place for settlement where he could locate with his numerous posterity and kindred to preside over them. He chose for his colony what is now known as Spring City, Utah, originally called "The Allred Settlement."

When the family first went to Spring City, they basically camped out from their wagons. However, the family settled on land that is currently located at 450 South 100 East in Spring City. The original James and Elizabeth Warren Allred home, is no longer there. The current house on the site that was built in 1890.

Allreds vs. the Creek Nation Overton County, Tennessee

Linda Allred Cooper

Linda, Jack, Jesse Booker, George Scotton, Emsley, Jesse, ?

On page 57 of the book, Overton County, Tennessee Genealogical Records, compiled by Edythe Rucker Whitley, I found an interesting entry. A Legislative Petition had been filed on October 26, 1813, requesting permission to organize to fight the Indians. 119 men signed the petition including Solomon and William Allred, most likely descendants of the "original" Solomon. Overton County was organized in 1806.

The petition read:

(spelling as written in the petition)

To the Honourable The General Assembly of the State of Tennessee now in Session.....

The Petition of the subscribers, Inhabitants of the County of Overton, Humbly Sheweth, that they here Disposed. To have a part in the Present War with Britane Majesty's Savage Allies, Viz. In the services of the United States on Similar occasions. And that the Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States Be instructed to Cause the said Act when passed by your Honourable body to be sanctioned by the National Legislature & c. An your Petitioners shall ever pray & c.

This is a portion of an 1814 map of the State of Tennessee from World Atlas, Matthew Carey, cartographer, from the David Rumsey collection.

Who were the Solomon and William Allred who signed the Petition? Harold G. Keisling tried to figure out who they were in 1992 when he submitted an article to the Overton County History Book Committee. This article was published (pages 179-180) in the book History of Overton County, TN which is on file in the Overton County Library. Keisling wrote:

“Allred families came to Overton County prior to 1813. The exact year is not known, but a search of the early deeds would probably establish it as about 1810. A petition was drawn up in 1813 to raise an army to forcibly subdue the Creek Indians. This petition was submitted to the State of Tennessee on October 27, 1813. Two signees were Solomon Allred and William Allred.

The 1820 census shows Francis Allred, John Allred, Jonathan Allred and Solomon Allred in Overton County. The 1830 census shows eleven Allred families living in Overton County. The head of households listed are Solomon (roll 188), Robert (roll 204), William (roll 208), Solomon (roll 208 with no children), Solomon (roll 208 with young children), John (roll 208), Samuel (roll 208), Bailey (roll 209), Theofolis (roll 210), John (roll 210), Solomon (roll 210) and Jonathan (roll 211).”

Confused? Me too. All those men named the same thing. How can we tell which one is which? Keisling had the same problem, as he wrote in his article:

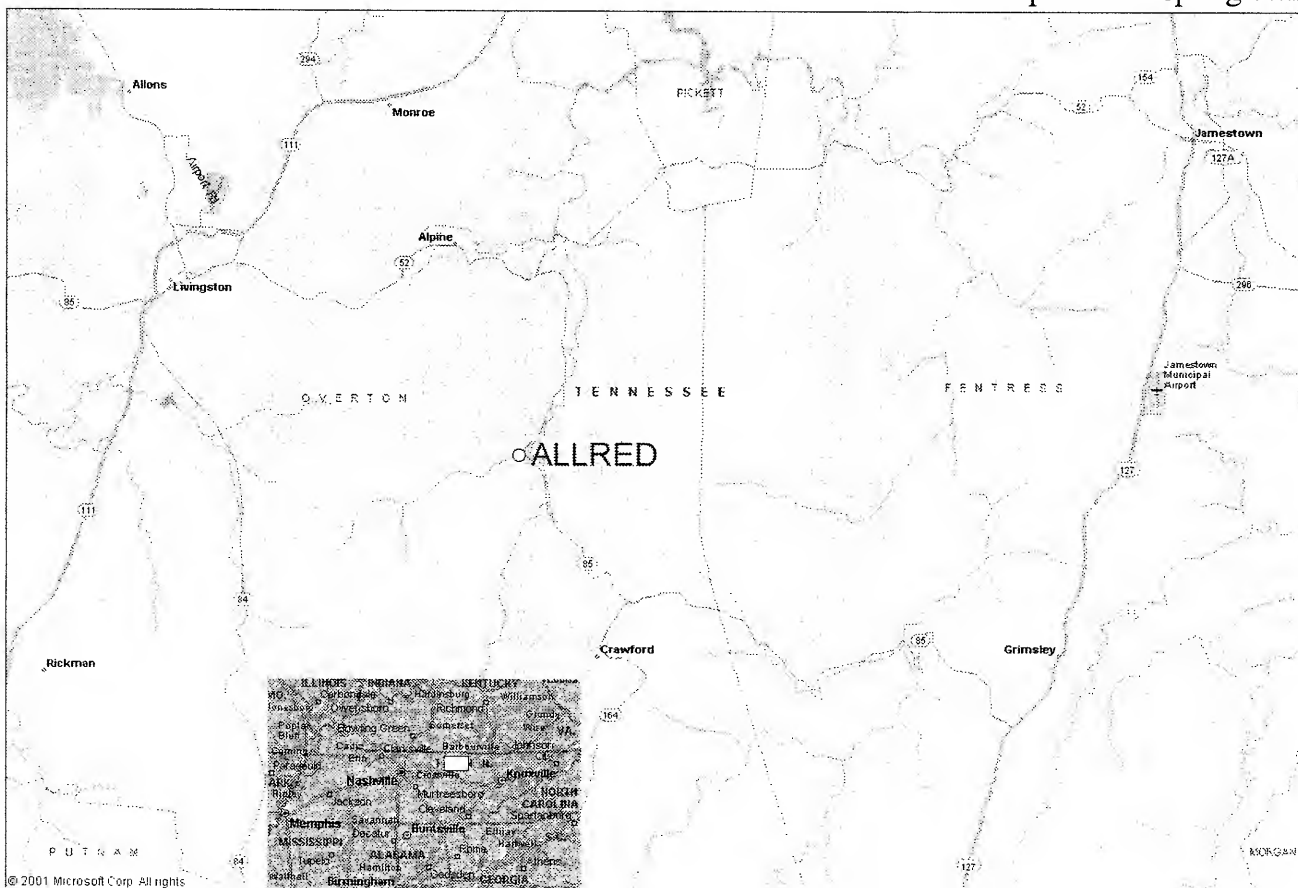

“Now it should be infinitely clear just who signed the 1813 Petition and who the Allreds are on the 1820 and the 1830 census. Solomon, the son of Solomon, and his brothers Phineas, Francis, and Theophilus with their families moved to Overton County. (Assumed by the count of Solomons on the 1830 census.)”

But, after listing the names of each of the Allred men’s spouses and children, Keisling finally admitted he couldn’t figure out which ones signed the Petition. He ended his article with the following question:

“Knowing all this, which Allreds do you think signed the 1813 Petition in Overton County?”

Do you know?

Source for 19th and 20th Century Maps

In an article by Kendra Mayfield in Wired News, March 7, 2002, she reports that David Rumsey is placing his entire collection of 19th and 20th Century maps online.

More than 6,500 high-resolution digital images from one of the largest private collections in the United States are now on the Internet. He has a collection of 150,000 maps that will eventually be online.

He is also collaborating with the Library of Congress to fuse that collection of 5,000 fully cataloged maps.

Membership Report

Currently we have 465 AFO members, representing 40 states, Canada and Mexico. Members descend from all four of the "original" Allreds and several "mystery" lines. Over the past year, when you sent in your membership renewal payment, I asked you to fill out a form asking several questions including "What would you like to read about in the newsletter?" We have received some very interesting and helpful suggestions and ideas, some of which have been posted in the newsletters. Although we still would like to hear your ideas and suggestions, we are changing that question on all upcoming notices. Several members have asked who the serious genealogists and researchers are and how they can be reached. Do they specialize in one specific branch of the family? Or do they research the entire family? So, look for these questions on your next membership renewal form. We appreciate your time and answers - and don't forget to add your suggestions and ideas! We love hearing from you!

Editor's Report

At the 2001 Spring City Reunion, there was a discussion of a bus trip following the route James Allred took from 1787 until 1852 when he founded Spring City, Utah. The route would begin in North Carolina, his birthplace, and follow his 65-year journey westward.

There is still much research to do. To do the trip properly, it would require at least two weeks. Most people do not have that much time to devote. I am still working on the project. It will be the spring of 2003 before my schedule will allow me to get back into this research and travel. When the trip information is complete, it will be posted on the Web site. Also, there will be a notebook available for purchase on the locations the family lived in or traveled through on this incredible journey.

In the meantime, keep your family stories and photographs coming.

Secretary's Report

The Board of Director's Chat List has been very busy lately. Our AFO Bylaws state that officers serve terms of two years and elections are held every other year. Since the AFO was reorganized in November 2000, our elections should take place in the Fall of 2002. However, unforeseen circumstances have caused the board to vote to postpone the election for now.

Treasurer's Report

After the first quarter of 2002, the AFO has a profit of $735. Printing the newsletter and the postage is still the major expense.
